

CUPER heat recovery unit design has been modified

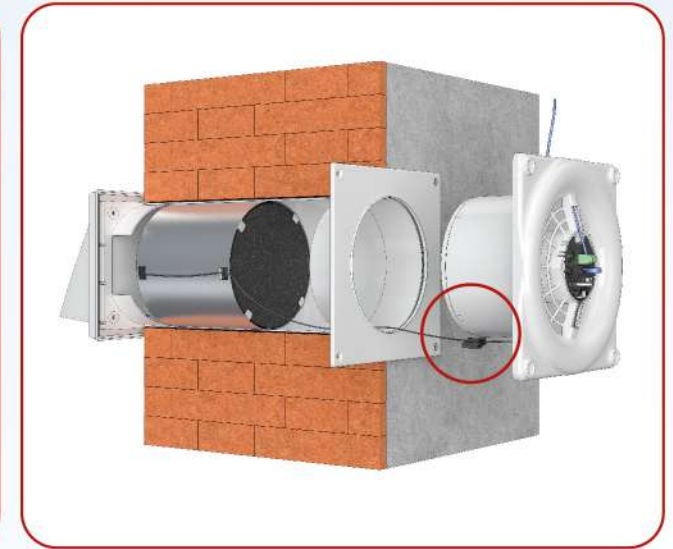

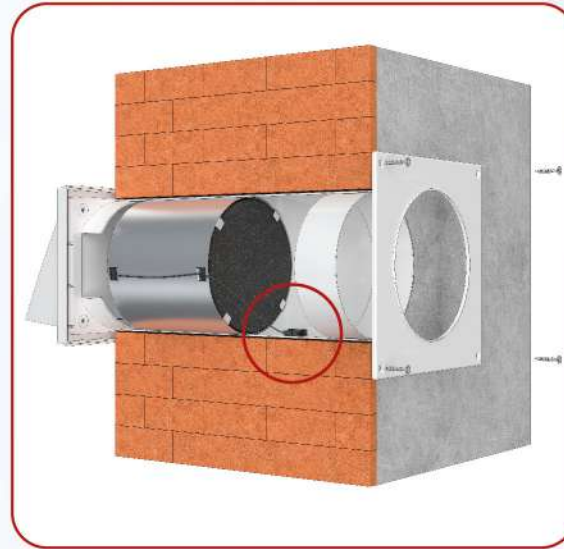

Before

Temperature sensors were previously located on a loop and hooked up to a control board through the plug.

Detailed video about a heat recovery unit CUPER

After

Now this sensor is a part of the board. Location like this doesn't make assembly harder and makes its mounting easier. Hooking up became simpler because you don't have to connect the enclosure to the sensor loop. An algorithm of operation in smart mode unchanged.

